Retractable Enclosures: The best of both worlds!

By Daina Feick

The guests are mingling, the food is fabulous and it's the perfect outdoor party. But what happens when it starts to rain or the temperature drops? Do you rush inside or call the party on account of cold weather?

For homeowners with an automated retractable enclosure from Covers in Play – an 'addition' that can significantly increase your use of both pool and patio – the answer is no. The party zone is well protected with a simple push of a button.

A 'sunroom on wheels'

Used around pools, spas, patios and decks, retractable enclosures are fully-glazed structures with individual sections that have the ability to retract, one inside the other. Each section has its own set of wheels mounted on a track system, guiding it as it opens and closes. Often compared to sunrooms and solariums, they provide an indoor setting with an outside view. Unlike traditional glass additions, however, you can also open them up to the great outdoors, which means the best of both worlds.

Designer and manufacturer, Covers in Play, makes these clever creations even more appealing through innovative design (including large vertical panels that provide a clear, unobstructed view of the outdoors, double glazed sealing and tempered sliding doors with screens and locks) and automated features unique to the industry.

Among those features – and standard to every Covers in Play enclosure – is an automated drive system that makes opening and closing easy with a push of a button. No manual pushing is required. For safety purposes, a key is required to activate this system. To stop it, simply release the same button. This feature is currently unique to Covers in Play enclosures and one of several patent pending design features of a Covers in Play enclosure.

Other appealing options include a Digital Control Panel with a touch screen display that monitors and maintains settings within your pool enclosure such as pool pump and heater, pool and air temperature, lighting and water features.

In addition to keeping your guests dry and comfortable, a pool or patio enclosure by Covers in Play extends your living space, boosts the value of your home, lets you enjoy the warmth of the sun without harmful UV rays and keeps annoying insects out. An enclosure will, in fact, allow three- and even four-season enjoyment of pools, spas and patios. Adding a uniquely designed 'hidden' heater will also ensure year-round usage even in colder climates.

Specifically for pools, a retractable enclosure offers further benefits.

- Environmentally, a pool enclosure helps keep water temperature up without relying solely on the heater (imagine not having to use your pool heater from April to October!). It can also reduce chemical use and water loss through evaporation.
- An enclosure will decrease the time required to skim and clean your pool.
- Peace of mind is another big advantage thanks to fully lockable doors that keep children and pets out of the pool area when you're not around.

In addition to many standard sizes and configurations, Covers in Play can also customize your enclosure to meet specific size or design requirements.
